Annotation: Today the problem of corruption can be faced in almost every country in the world. Corruption is one of the topics widely discussed in recent years by the international as a transnational crime. In this article we will talk about corruption.

Keywords: Corruption vices, criminal liability, public policy, strategy, round tables.

Looking back at history, in primitive societies, which were the first period of the process of human formation, there were also some manifestations of corruption, during which it was considered natural to pay the tribal elder or military chiefs for the acquisition of a certain privilege. And then, according to the improvement and complication of Public Administration, various forms of corruption also arose, which ultimately became one of the global problems. We know that the concepts of personality, society and the state are closely related. For this reason, a vice that has affected any member of society will certainly not have its effect on the entire society. The emergence and development of corruption hinders the development of this country and resists the reforms carried out by the state. Officials enslaved to the science of corruption abuse the Trust expressed by the state, society, people, putting their interests above the interests of the people and the state. As a result, a whole society suffers. Corruption erodes the state not only in material, but also in spiritual and moral terms, leading to the emergence of a huge border between the people and the state, which is called insecurity. This leads to the fading of feelings of immunity to the motherland and confidence in the future among the people. Abuse of one's own career or service position, illegal use of it in order to obtain material or intangible benefits in the interests of one's own or others, entails criminal liability. As you understand, we are talking about corruption. Today in our society there is a serious struggle against this vice, despite the fact that its consequences are explained to the population through the media, at various meetings, round tables, events, unfortunately, we have not achieved a sharp reduction in corruption. Why can't we get rid of the scourge of corruption? What prevents this?

We know that at least two parties are always involved in corruption. In this case, on the one hand, an official who illegally makes a fortune for himself or a third person, and on the other hand, an official who expects the adoption of a decision that pursues his interests in an active or passive way. Corruption, in a simpler way, can be said to achieve a selfish goal, as well as something, by bypassing the law in the interests of one's own ego and self-interest. Today, the fight against this vice in our country has become one of the main directions of state policy. Its legal basis, organizational structure and implementation strategy are also clear. Uzbekistan's accession to the United Nations Anti-Corruption convention in this regard was the first important step in the reforms. As a national mechanism for its implementation, the law “on the fight against corruption”, the President's decision “on measures to implement the provisions of the law of the Republic of Uzbekistan” on the fight against corruption” were adopted.

As a result of the effective execution of these, many crimes are exposed, those who are at risk of being committed are prevented. We are following this through the media every day. It's good, of course. But not enough of them. We need to fight corruption more actively. This should be our attention, all of us.

It should be noted that the damage caused by corruption is equal for all states, and this VICE has a negative impact on various spheres of the state, in particular on the reforms carried out on the political, economic, social, cultural fronts, as well as on the country's image and investment attractiveness in the international arena. President of The Republic of Uzbekistan Sh.M Mirziyoyev noted in his address to the Supreme Assembly of the Republic of Uzbekistan on January 24, 2020, “the vices of corruption in our society are in full swing with their various manifestations. If we do not prevent this evil scourge, it is impossible to create a real business and investment environment, in general, not a single network of society will develop”

Corruption... how evil it is. This Vice, which worries the entire world community today, has long been one of the most repulsive factors that have hindered the prosperity of society and the state. Speaking of corruption, it is not surprising that the lexical meaning of this word makes everyone think equally, of course. Let's dwell on this. The term "corruption “is derived from Latin and Means” corruppo “ – ” sale for bribes“,” nausea”. Broadly speaking, it is a practice that is associated with the direct abuse of the rights and valuations granted by an official by his or her career for personal enrichment purposes, in his or her own interest.
